Two Master of Science Programs

Master of Science in Curriculum and Instruction

The Curriculum and Instruction degree is a comprehensive program that works to strengthen your instructional skills and leadership abilities.

The program consists of 12 required courses (36 credit hours), allowing you to complete the program in as little as 18 months. Sessions conveniently begin every eight weeks. You may even be able to transfer up to six credit hours from other regionally accredited universities.

Upon successful completion of this program, you will have gained new knowledge and broadened perspectives about contemporary instructional methods and strategies; increased your ability to interpret student, building and district test results and data; integrated curriculum across multiple disciplines; and enhanced your work on curriculum mapping, scope and sequences. You will be better prepared to move into a leadership position as a department chair, instructional specialist, director of curriculum, curriculum designer and other leadership positions of your choosing.

Master of Science in Educational Administration

The Educational Administration degree is a comprehensive program that provides you with the knowledge you need to become an exceptional leader in your organization.

The program consists of 13 required courses (39 credit hours), allowing you to complete the program in as little as 18 months. Sessions conveniently begin every eight weeks. You may even be able to transfer up to nine credit hours from other regionally accredited universities.

Upon successful completion of this program, you will have gained practical administrative knowledge and developed a more comprehensive understanding of school administration. You will be exposed to school finance, school law, personnel issues, complex organizations, and how to bring about change. Your degree will provide you an opportunity to apply for various administrative positions at the building or district levels.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SCRANTON

Nestled in the beautiful Pocono Mountains of Northeastern Pennsylvania, The University of Scranton is a Catholic and Jesuit university dedicated to freedom of inquiry, the pursuit of wisdom, integrity and truth, and the personal growth and development of all who share in its life. The University of Scranton was founded in 1888.

The university has more than 38,000 graduates, with a current population of approximately 4,700 students, including adult, part-time and graduate students. There are 3,700 full-time undergraduate students who come from 29 states and 12 foreign countries. The professors are known for their excellence in teaching and for the personal attention they give to students. Of our 256 faculty members, 84 percent hold doctoral or other terminal degrees in their field. With outstanding online communication tools, students have ample opportunity to ask questions, participate in research and meet with faculty.

Accreditation:

The University of Scranton is accredited by The Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools, and the Graduate School is accredited by the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE) and other accrediting bodies.
